Dear Dan,
I've been reflecting on and enjoying the great energy I got from the conference. I can't tell you how much I enjoyed it. You and your team did an incredible job. One thing that impressed me, especially compared to other conferences I've attended, was people's sincere effort to share and learn from each other. I look forward to coming again.

There's much more for us to talk about and the evaluation chat room link will help. We are in the process of updating our computer and that chat room should be up and running by month's end. Folks here loved the idea of a summary list of what other folks are doing for evaluation of volunteer programs and initiatives and links to them. We'll create an evaluation link in our YouthFriends evaluation page that will have programs, what they do for evaluation, challenges and lessons learned in doing eval., and how do they use eval (e.g., to get resources and support).

Toward this end it would be great to start summarizing such information from the folks who attended the conference. Many at the evaluation workshop were just starting to do or consider eval.

There's much more to discuss so I'll write more in a letter. One area I'm very interested in is how you might use your data/maps/other eval. info. for your own or other's decision-making processes and how you use it to understand and improve your work. It would be great to make such processes (more) systematic and I think I have some ideas. So we'll talk soon. I'll be out of town 11/15 to 11/30; by then our new computer/server system should be up.

Thanks again and please pass on my thanks to your team,
Steve Russos

Happy holidays and best wishes for the new year!

Dan, Hope all is well. Just a brief update. We're still waiting for a new server (though our present one is working it has some problems) so our chat rooms and discussion areas are still down. Just in case you want to reach me over the next few weeks, just leave a message at 785-867-1083 (my voice mail box) and I can get back to you. I'll be without email from 12/22 until about 1/10.

Have a great time and see you in 1999, Steve

Dan, I just received your package in the mail. Thanks a billion - it is a great holiday present! I am eager to get back to it (I've only read the letter) now. I will respond back by early January after I read through the material and also get "Kindness of Strangers." You know it's a bit amazing for me, but in my graduate school career it is rare that I receive such helpful and specific feedback to something I wrote. You are the first person with whom I've communicated some of my ideas in that letter and I greatly appreciate your time and considerate response.

All the best holiday wishes for you and your family, Talk to you soon, Steve

Hi Dan, Happy '99!

Just a quick hello. More news coming your way as I sit down this weekend. Your reports were very helpful to read. I read The Kindness of Strangers over my break. Excellent book with a great review of some of the opportunities and challenges of the field. This will be very helpful to my work in the next few months. I think Public/Private ventures (who helped fund the book) could be a great source of funding for us. I also heard the McArthur Foundation in Chicago contributes substantially to their income. Speaking of funding, have you considered selling advertising space to businesses that market/produce items for youth and volunteers targeted by the groups that come to the TMC conference. You may already be doing this, but I bet folks who produce educational and recreation materials would love to tap into the "distributors" that attend and have booths at the conference.

More to come, Steve ps another book I'm almost done with (I think you already know of it) is Build to Last. It's an excellent review of the success and contributing factors of the top 20 "visionary companies" and 20 comparison companies. It's filled with lessons that could be applied to our work. Enjoy.

Hi Dan. You are very welcome. Some more material should reach you by mail later in the week. After that maybe we should have a phone conversation and discuss some next steps. Also, we have a new and improved server in our office and our chat/discussion rooms should be up and running soon (our programmer just returned today from winter break). Looking forward to talking, Steve

Hi Steve,

Your letter was great and full of hope. I've attached my comments and will mail you a hard copy plus the reports you requested. I look forward to finding the first steps so we can make things continue to happen as we build a solid structure for the future.

Dan

Greetings from the University of Kansas Community Tool Box!

Hello! My name is Shawna Smith, and I am an employee of the KU Community Tool Box, a project aimed at facilitating and encouraging community growth and development (for additional information on our project, please check out our web site: <http://www.ctb.lsi.ukans.edu>). In addition to maintaining and updating our web site, one of the projects we are currently undertaking is the development of a Success Stories database--a place where community organizations/activities can post stories of their achievements, and where other organizations can reference to find ideas and encouragement.

Tutor/Mentor Connections seems to fit the exact profile we are looking for--an organization that has found a need in the community and has worked to meet that need. We would love to have a success story from you added as one of our first entries in the database, and we were wondering if this would be something you would/could participate in for us.

Right now, we are looking for any kind of story that epitomizes community growth and development, or projects aimed at these goals. Although the Tutor/Mentor Connection was the project that first caught our eye, please feel free to submit other stories in addition to, or in lieu of a story on this topic. There are three databases that will eventually be up and running--Success Stories, Community Champions, and Lessons Learned. For the Stories database, we are looking mainly for the bare-bones details of the program--how the idea came about, what it was targeted to accomplish, where funding came from, what kind of results you experienced, etc.

The database is currently set up for email access--if an organization visited the page and wished to add a story to the database, they would simply have to email the story to us, and we would edit it and put it up. This will ideally be the process sometime in the near future. For now, however, as there are very few stories in the database, people are not submitting their stories to us--hence, this jump-start effort. We are hoping that by getting several great models of stories in the database, people will be more encouraged and more confident to submit their own.

If this is something that interests you, there are several ways we can go about getting the story on the database:

- (1) you could simply write and submit a short "story" to me, which I would be happy to edit and post on the database;
- (2) using information that is currently available on your web site, as well as any additional info you would like to provide me via email, I could compose a story to post on the database (incorporating, of course, any edits/ideas/etc. you deem necessary); or
- (3) we could go through the entire interview process, from which I could compose a story to give to you for review and to put on the database.

Any of these options are feasible from this end (although 2 would PROBABLY be preferred), so please let us know which would best accommodate your needs and wishes.

I thank you for your time, and look forward to the ability to add Tutor/Mentor Connections to our Success Stories web site soon. Please feel free to contact me should you have any questions or concerns. If you are interested in viewing the actual Success Stories database, it can be accessed at <http://www.ctb.lsi.ukans.edu/ctb/stories.html>.

3. The Progressive Technology Project has announced it is awarding grants of up to $10,000 to socially progressive community-based groups that want to boost their technology resources. The grants may be used for hardware and software, applications design, or training and support. April 9 is the application deadline for the inaugural round of grants. For information, contact: Progressive Technology Project, 123 Seventh Avenue, Box 201, Brooklyn, NY 11215.

4. The Nonprofit Policy and Technology Project recently announced its 1999 Pilot Project Grants Program. Through these grants, the Project assists nonprofit efforts that use technology to develop or strengthen their public policy activities. Up to $65,000 will be distributed this year, with individual grants ranging from $5,000 to $25,000. Descriptions of the 1998 grant recipients and information and full guidelines for the 1999 pilot project grants are available at <http://www.ombwatch.org/ombw/npt>

Thanks to all those who gave us their feedback on the new Directory of Consultants, Products and Services.

Based on this feedback, we decided to give every new company and consultant a free trial period of 30 days, and to charge independent freelancers only $95 per year, while leaving the $195 membership fee for companies with a staff of two or more.

80 consultants have already signed up in the Directory, and you can now browse all of them by specialty at:

Day

Hi Dan and Julie. Hope all is going well.
Here's quite a rough draft of the budget, but I bet we can shape it up by next Wednesday so we can get it to DC by April 2. I began working on staff descriptions, but this is not needed for the April 2 preliminary proposal. I will be in St. Louis today, Wednesday, through Sunday about 6pm and without email during this time. But I do want to discuss this budget during this time. So what I will do is call each of you during Thursday sometime. Dan I'll call you at work and Julie I'll call you after 6pm at home at the number you gave me. If I don't reach you I'll tell you where I can be reached. If there is a way we can set up a 3-way conversation Thursday that would be good too.

Dan, I sent for information from the Technology Project (information did not have a phone number for them and I could not find them on the web) which give money for hard and soft ware (application is due to them April 9). I also got your feedback from the previous draft and I'll incorporate it. One thing I will also add is some way for participants to get a certificate or some type of acknowledgement for contributing/participating. I'm not sure if someday folks can get university credit, but for now it would be good if participants could have some trace that they are spending time to improve themselves and their work. May be the certificate can be approved/signed by a national mentoring sponsor or other accepted authority in the field. This could also help prompt participation.

By Monday, Anne at Chapin Hall will give us an answer about their ability to help us evaluate this project.

Dan, when I get back on Sunday we can start working on the UPS proposal.

Thanks I look forward to your feedback. Steve
